Opening Essay. Perhaps one of the most spectacular chemical reactions involving a gas occurred on May 6, 1937, when the German airship Hindenburg exploded on approach to the Naval Air Station in Lakehurst, New Jersey. The actual cause of the explosion is still unknown, but the entire volume of hydrogen gas used to float the airship, about 200,000 m³, burned in less than a minute.

7.1 Introduction: Recall from Chapter 1 that solutions are defined as homogeneous mixtures that are mixed so thoroughly that neither component can be observed independently of the other. Solutions are all around us. Air, for example, is a solution. If you live near a lake, a river, or an ocean, that body of water is not pure H₂O but most probably a solution.

Therefore, the off-stoichiometry of layer-structured oxides with the Na ions may differentiate not only their capacities but also the cyclic stabilities, kinetics, and so on, highlighting the importance of Na ion content. However, Na₂CO₃ tends to be irreversibly formed on surface by making use of the Na ions lost from the lattice. Thereby ...

Balancing Equations. The chemical equation described in section 4.1 is balanced, meaning that equal numbers of atoms for each element involved in the reaction are represented on the reactant and product sides. This is a requirement the equation must satisfy to be consistent with the law of conservation of matter.
